I/we, as law abiding citizen(s) of the UK, put you on notice that we are aware that links between mobile phones and phone mast installations are now established to have potential adverse effects on health, amenity, devaluation of property and possibly other unspecified but quantifiable effects.

There is now a great weight of worldwide research and evidence proving risk and therefore we wish to condemn those Government members responsible for withholding the truth from us and for making decisions leading to and sustaining the unjustified and biased situations stated below.

- Allowing and facilitating mobile phone companies to continue to misinform the general public, by omission of valid science and reliable information; by turning a blind eye to their factually incorrect statements on the safety of masts; and the failure to recall products, as would be the case with carcinogens in additives in food.
- The manipulation of guidelines for safety i.e. NRPB and ICNIRP guidelines, and encouragement of the omission of the relevance of biological effects which have been totally ignored by UK government bodies.
- Gross misinformation, by omission, of peer-reviewed science abroad, and in this country, and other factors relevant to this issue.
- The manipulation of planning laws to fast track these mast applications.
- The exclusion of the right to object on the grounds of 'health and perceptions of fear for health' in all mast planning processes.
- The denial of our fundamental human rights, in particular the right to health, in all mast planning processes.
- The total disregard for the health and safety of UK citizens.
- Failure to implement recommendations of the Stewart Report
- Failure to address the issues of TETRA, particularly as Stewart stated that this is outside his remit.

The Stewart report did not cover Tetra in their remit, but they bravely concluded that, "...modulation around 16 Hz should be avoided, if possible, in future developments."

Later, when giving evidence to the 10th parliamentary committee of the DTI, when asked if the amplitude modulation around 16 Hertz was the most critical area, which posed the highest risk, Sir William Stewart felt it, "...was an area that should be avoided..." and then went on to describe Tetra as a hazard! The conclusion of that committee was, "...we are very disturbed that there seems to have been no examination of the evidence on potentially adverse health effects, before bringing it into service..."

The Stewart report, in the opinion of Mast Sanity, is not an acceptable position to evaluate the safe siting of any mobile phone or Tetra base station but the Government and the operators constantly use it in their arguments, except in this instance.

If they are going to insist on accepting the conclusions of the Stewart report as the correct position, then they should accept Stewart's position of Tetra as well.

The Stewart report is still used as a base position for the Government and the authorities and therefore it should be used equally as a base position for Tetra.

- Failure to acknowledge anecdotal evidence of ill health around mast sites across the UK, and especially around 3G and TETRA masts, transmissions from which are untested on humans. Failure to act on cancer clusters around other masts.
- Failure to notify doctors, dentists and medical staff that some members of the community might suffer adverse effects from microwave technology, with the result that many people have been unfairly treated or ignored.
- Failure to provide a mechanism for compensation for those who suffer devaluation of house prices due to the presence of masts, while government coffers fill and phone company profits rise.
- Personal comment.....
